The following objects are masked from 'package:base':
##
intersect, setdiff, setequal, union
```

```
library(ggplot2)
tweet <- read.csv('Tweets.csv')
prop.table(table(tweet$airline_sentiment))
```

```
##

```
tweet$text <- gsub("^@\\w+ *", "", tweet$text) # remove @airline unnest\_tokens deal with punctuations and lowercase, we just need to worry about the other preprocessings required on the data

library(tm)

Selecting by n

The common words are flight, cancelled, service, customer, time, hours, hold etc.

Since we are looking at the Airline data, the flight is common and should not be on much value in this analysis and hence removed.

tweet_data_token2 <- subset(tweet_data_token, word != 'flight') tweet_data_token2 <- subset(tweet_data_token2, word != 'dy')

Creat a word cloud of the Negative words pal = brewer.pal(8,"Dark2") ggplot(top_words, aes(word, n, fill = airline_sentiment)) + geom_col(show.legend = FALSE) +

  facet_wrap(~airline_sentiment, scales = "free") +
  coord_flip()
```

We should always check which words are contributing to the sentiment scores. Depending on the dataset it may not be what you want.

Comparison of positive and negative reation by airline

```
tweet_data_token2 %>%
  count(airline, airline_sentiment) %>%
  group_by(airline) %>%
  ggplot(aes(airline, n, fill = airline)) +
  geom_col(show.legend = FALSE) +
  facet_wrap(~ airline_sentiment, scales = "free") +
  coord_flip()
```

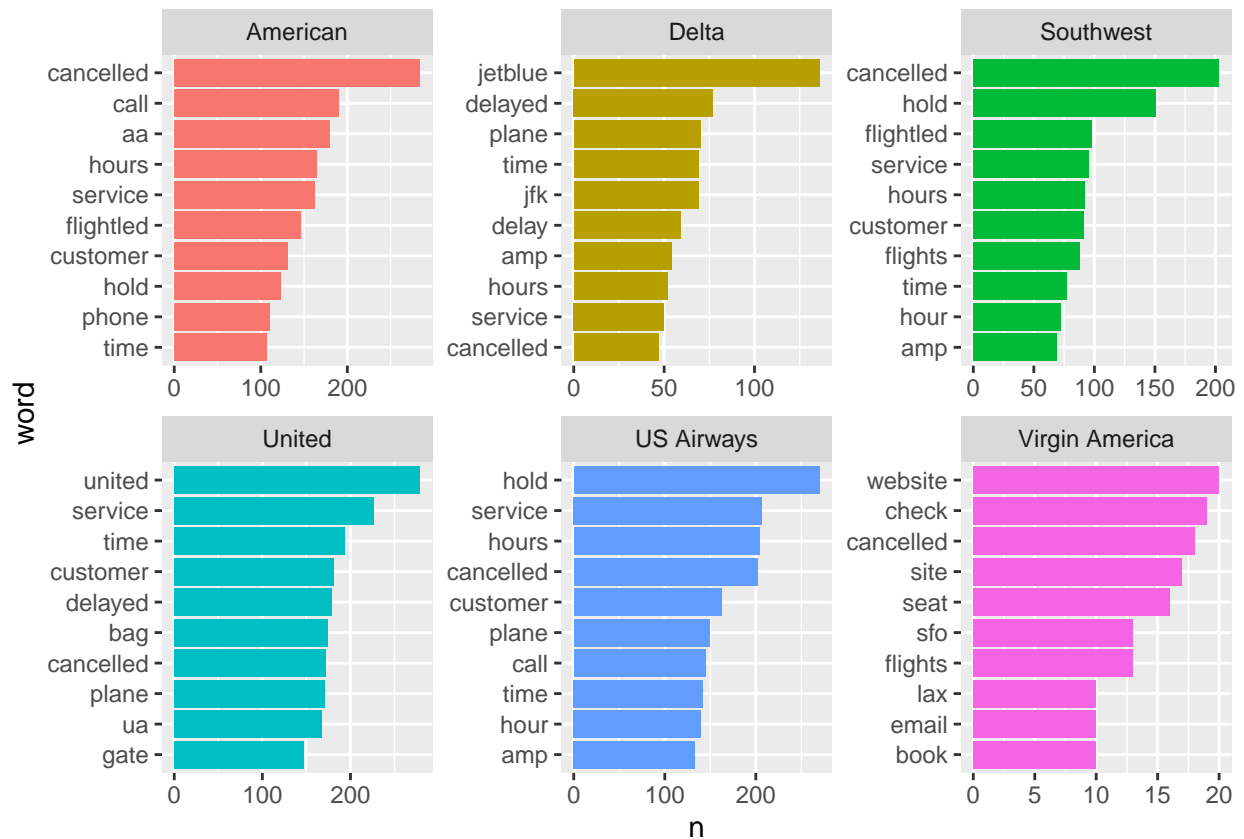

```
new2 <- subset(tweet_data_token2, select=c('airline','airline_sentiment','word'))
```

Analyse top negative words for each airline

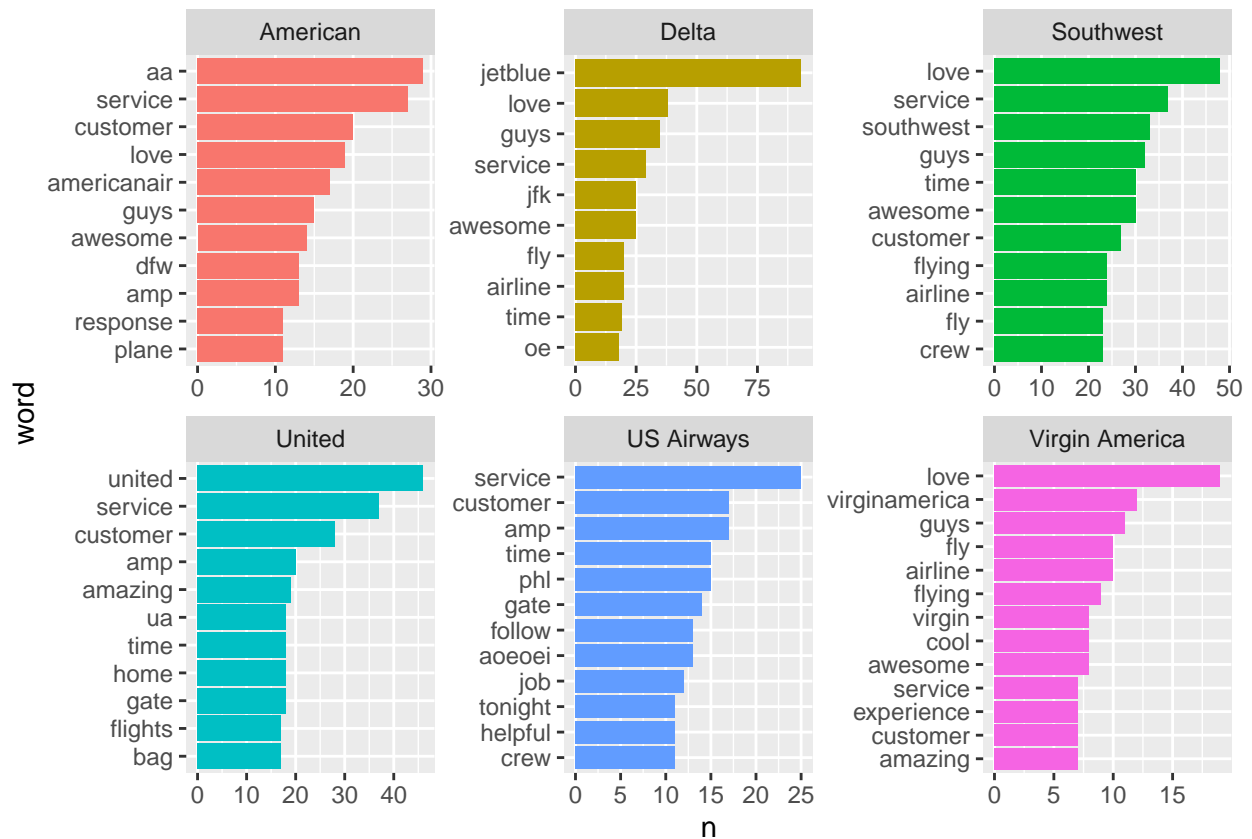

```
new2 %>%
  filter(airline_sentiment == "negative") %>%
  count(word, airline) %>%
  group_by(airline) %>%
  top_n(10, n) %>%
  ungroup() %>%
  mutate(word = reorder(paste(word, airline, sep = "__"), n)) %>% ggplot(aes(word, n, fill = airline)) +
  geom_col(show.legend = FALSE) +
  scale_x_discrete(labels = function(x) gsub("__.$", "", x)) + facet_wrap(~ airline, nrow = 2, scales = "free") +
  coord_flip()
```

Analyse top Positive words for each airline

```
new2 %>%
  filter(airline_sentiment == "positive") %>%
  count(word, airline) %>%
  group_by(airline) %>%
  top_n(10, n) %>%
  ungroup() %>%
  mutate(word = reorder(paste(word, airline, sep = "__"), n)) %>%
  ggplot(aes(word, n, fill = airline)) +
  geom_col(show.legend = FALSE) +
  scale_x_discrete(labels = function(x) gsub("__.$", "", x)) +
  facet_wrap(~ airline, nrow = 2, scales = "free") +
  coord_flip()
```

Understanding the reasons for negative sentiments

```
tweet_data %>%
  filter(!is.na(negativereason)) %>%
  count(airline, negativereason) %>% ggplot(aes(negativereason, n))+ geom_bar(stat = "identity", fill = "black")+ facet_wrap(~airline, ncol = 3)+ labs(x = "Reason", y = "Frequency")+
  coord_flip()
```

This bar chart helps us to identify the main issues related to each airlines. We cant really compare which airline is better from this data as the distribution of tweets for each airline is severely imbalanced. We can however conclude that one of the main issue is the terrible Customer service.

tweet_data %>%
  filter(!is.na(negativereason)) %>%
  count(airline, negativereason) %>% ggplot(aes(airline, n))+ geom_bar(stat = "identity", colour = "grey19", fill = "orange")+ facet_wrap(~negativereason, ncol = 3)+ labs(x = "Airlines", y = "Frequency") +
  coord_flip()
```

Such plot can be useful in a situation where we extract samples of equal distribution of data for each airline. Ideally from this plot we could understand which airline is performing well or poorly for each reason.
